DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The AXA Building is a highly ornate and decorative two and one-half story red brick commercial building in the Victorian style. The main facade on Fifth Street, which measures two major sections. These are connected on the ground floor by an imposing semicircular arch which is also the main entrance to the building. The north facade on Delaware Street measures 48 feet in width.

An obvious attempt at symmetry in the building design is evidenced by the series of paired bay windows and the trim of the second floor. All windows are elaborately detailed and small circular pediments are located at the top of each bay window. Above the second story windows is a row of square multi-paned windows, which are symmetrically grouped.

The corners of the building, as well as the window jambs, are quoined with light tan-colored bricks. An ornate cornice with much decorative trim and coupled brackets tops the building.

The first floor of the north facade was considerably altered by the remodeling of the drugstore. The original entrance to the drugstore was set at an angle at the northwest corner of the building. Now there are two entrances—one on the north and the other on the west facade, a portion of which was changed by the remodeling. The sheltering porch extending from the north facade is also an addition. The rest of the exterior seems to be much as it was originally except for the removal of two coupled brackets at the northwest corner, apparently to permit placement of a sign.

The AXA Building with space for five stores and 26 office suites was built as a rental property. The store facilities were on the first floor and fronted on Fifth and Delaware streets, two of Leavenworth's busiest streets. The second floor offices were designed to attract professional men--lawyers, doctors, and dentists.

The building is still used as a rental property and still houses some professional offices. However, recent city directories indicate that many of the office suites are unoccupied.
